Sign Up Time Again to Support Rescue

The Ralph's grocery store chain has a shopper reward program that offers in store benefits to their store shoppers and has been very beneficial to the bulldog rescue program too.

Ralph's store shoppers save with their 'rewards cards' in order to get in store discounts at the cash register. What most people do not realize that store shoppers can also select Southern California Bulldog Rescue as a community partner to receive free store donations based on how much a shopper spends in the store.

When you look at the bottom of your Ralph's store receipt, it will be printed at the bottom with a message "Thanking you for supporting Southern California Bulldog Rescue". This message confirms that the store is going to make donation in your name to So Cal Bulldog Rescue, based on the purchase you just made in the store.

This community benefit is all free to the shoppers and with many shoppers signed up, bulldog rescue benefits a great deal. The percentage given to rescue ranges from 1% to 4% each quarter and is averaging $700.00 to rescue every few months.

Shoppers can support rescue by signing up at the Ralphs WebSite, signing into your account and going to your account settings. While in your account settings you want to choose Southern California Bulldog Rescue as your selection for community rewards. Southern California is # 84547.

If you are having problems with the on-line sign up, you can call to 1-800-443-4438.

The more shoppers that sign up, the larger the check Southern California Bulldog Rescue will earn every three months.

You only have to sign up once a year for it to last for the next 12 months.

Please do it today and ask a friend to sign up too!

Thank you for your continued support!

Sincerely,
Southern California Bulldog Rescue

Worms In Dogs

Canine worms can cause a variety of health problems in dogs. Here you'll find a brief description of the most common types of worms in dogs, with links to in-depth articles on how these worms can infect your dog and what you can do to prevent and treat them.

Ringworm

Despite its name, ringworm is not a worm at all. It is a skin infection caused by a fungus. In dogs, ringworm often presents as a dry, gray, scaly patch, although it may cause no symptoms at all. In people, it forms a round, red lesion with a ring-like appearance. Dogs pick up ringworm when their skin comes into contact with the spores of the fungus. People can catch it by touching an infected pet. Treatment for ringworm in dogs may involve medicated dips, shampoos, or ointments. Your dog may also need oral medication for one to two months. You may need to take other measures to clear ringworm from the environment or prevent its spread.

Roundworms

Usually spread in feces or during pregnancy or nursing, the roundworm causes a serious infection in dogs and puppies. The roundworm eats the food of its host and may cause diarrhea and other symptoms. In puppies, roundworms can be fatal. Prescription and over-the-counter deworming products for dogs are very effective. If people contract roundworms, their symptoms can be even more serious than those in dogs.

Hookworms

Living mainly in the small intestine, hookworms suck the blood of their hosts. Puppies can become infected from their mothers. Adult dogs can be infected through their skin or when cleaning themselves. Infection causes weakness and malnutrition and can lead to death in puppies. Two rounds of deworming are usually effective, but a puppy may need other treatment as well. Humans can also become infected with hookworms from unwashed vegetables or by walking barefoot on sand and soil.

Heartworm

Heartworms are spread to dogs through mosquito bites. Up to 14 inches long, a heartworm lives in the heart and the arteries that carry blood from the heart to the lungs. Heartworms affect how the heart functions and how blood clots and is likely to cause death if untreated. Monthly heartworm preventives are effective. If infected, your dog may cough, have trouble breathing, and experience other symptoms. Treatment may involve two or three injections of arsenic-based drugs, followed by at least a month of rest.

Whipworms

Smaller than other canine worms, whipworms live in the area where the small and large intestines meet. Here, they suck the blood of their hosts. Dogs can pick them up from contaminated soil or by grooming. Whipworms do not cause serious blood loss or other serious symptoms unless large numbers embed in the intestine. Some heartworm preventives are effective against whipworms, and an oral dewormer is effective at eliminating whipworms.

Tapeworms

Dogs get tapeworms from licking themselves and swallowing fleas, which carry them. Tapeworms absorb some of the dog's nutrients from the intestine, where they attach. The tapeworm is made up of small segments, each about the size of a grain of rice. These are passed in feces and can sometimes be seen around the dog's anus. An injection or tablet can kill tapeworms. Humans can also get tapeworms.
